Panzer Units Moving To East After Passing Stalin Defenses

Pincer Units Near Contact In Leningrad District, Reich Announces

BERLIN, July 21—Nazi Panzer squadrons were reported still pouring east beyond the Stalin Line today while German military dispatches claimed that Soviet losses in the war so far have reached the staggering total of some 2,000,000 men.

These reports said the gigantic struggle that has raged since the Germans crossed the Stalin Line has cost the Red armies another million men, in addition to the million the Russians are said to have lost in the earlier stages of the conflict.

Further successes were gained on the southern end of the front, it was claimed, as German, Romanian and Hungarian troops broke desperate resistance by weak rear-guard detachments and pursued the beaten foe.

The Germans annihilated a whole Soviet division in the Mogilev area July 19, it was said, and crushed the remnants of five Red divisions in the north where four thousand were killed, other thousands surrendered, and a large amount of booty was taken.

German dispatches indicated that the attack of Chancellor Hitler's legions has accomplished more extensive disruption of the Russian war machine than even the most optimistic hopes of German strategists anticipated 10 days ago.

Pursuit Speeded

German military authorities asserted that the German pursuit of retreating Soviet formations has now swung into full stride along the entire front.

They also declared that within a 75-mile zone east of the Stalin Line roaring "annihilation battles" are now in progress to liquidate the hundreds of thousands of Red army troops caught in this area.

Nowhere was there a single suggestion that the resistance offered by the Soviets has succeeded in blocking the forward sweep of the Nazi military steam-roller.

On the basis of events in the last four weeks, German military experts expressed a growing certainty that the German plan to wipe out, as far as possible, the Russian military colossus in western Russia through a series of "annihilation battles" is nearing its goal.

It was conceded, however, that formidable tasks lie ahead for the Germans in view of the fact that Traffic accidents and drownings in Ohio again claimed at least a score of lives over the week end, a survey showed today. Sixteen persons lost their lives in crashes, and three boys were drowned.

The Cincinnati area alone recorded five fatalities—two men struck by trains, two in traffic crashes, and a boy drowning victim.

Nine-year-old Marvin Banker was drowned when he waded beyond his depth at a swimming pool in suburban Lockland.

Two persons were killed and four others critically injured when an auto loaded with picnickers and a truck collided at an intersection west of Troy. Jack Elleman, 18, of Troy, the driver of the auto, and Edward Gilliard, 39, of near Laura, the truck driver, were killed.

Labor Department Confirms Rumors Of Survey In Pickaway Area

NOTHING PLANNED NOW

Williamsport Mentioned As Possible Location For Negro Selectees

WASHINGTON, July 21—The Labor Department today confirmed that it was conducting a survey of local wage scales and labor conditions in Pickaway County, Ohio, for the War Department, with the possibility that some sort of an arms or defense industry soon may be located there.

A spokesman said letters had been sent to contractors, labor leaders and officials of other government departments in an effort to obtain complete data on local conditions. The survey, it was said, centered on the area between Circleville, the county seat, and Williamsport, ten miles west.

Williamsport previously had been mentioned as a possible site of a training camp for Negro selectees.

The spokesman pointed out that the survey was only the first step of a long-range program which might be abandoned for any one of dozens of reasons, and that so far as he knew, neither a camp nor plant of any kind was planned for the area at the present time.

"It is just one of several sites being considered," he said. "No site has as yet been selected."

It was reported last week that the Columbus Building Trades Council had received requests from the war department for information on wage scales, availability of workmen, and other factors in the Circleville area.

At the same time the Federal Power Commission included in its list of power plants which the government desired to increase capacity the Pickaway unit of the Columbus and Southern Ohio Electric Co. This also was taken as an indication that the area was being considered for some type of large National Defense project.

GERHARDT PENS NOTE TO STATE GAME OFFICIAL

George Gerhardt, secretary of the Pickaway County Farmers' and Sportsman's Association, mailed a letter to State Game Commissioner Don Waters, Monday, protesting the transfer of Games Protector Clarence Francis from Pickaway to Fairfield County.

The sportsman's club secretary said that in his letter to the Conservation Commissioner he had asked for "definite reasons" why the transfer was made and why the local club had not been notified of the transfer.

In writing Commissioner Waters, Gerhardt carried out the instructions of the club, which at its meeting last Thursday night charged that the transfer was "a political scheme on the part of three of our Circleville sportsmen."

The transfer, which became effective July 15, prohibits Francis from making any arrests or investigations in Pickaway County until after January 1. It placed Fairfield County's game protector, Clarence Hiller, in Pickaway County for the remainder of the year.

COUNTY'S WHEAT YIELD TO RIVAL ANY OHIO AREA

Total wheat production in Pickaway County this year will rival that of any in the state, agricultural officials predicted Monday.

AAA officials estimated that wheat yields in the county would average 25 bushels to the acre, and with the county's total wheat acreage approximated at 62,000, total production will be around 1,560,000 bushels.

Pickaway County has the largest wheat acreage of any county in the state. Seneca County ranks second.

With high prices on wheat, the county crop is valued at $1,240,000.

More and more local farmers are registering their approval of the government's wheat marketing quota program, according to county AAA committeemen. The general opinion among the farmers, AAA officials report, is that they would rather pay the 49 cent penalty on their excess wheat and be assured of top prices on their free grain than they would pay a lower price without penalty.

President Asks Solons To Keep Men Over Year

International Situation Far Worse Than Year Ago, Chief Executive Informs Congress In Important Address

WASHINGTON, July 21—Urging Congress to pass pending legislation extending the service of Draftees, National Guardsmen and Reservists, President Roosevelt, today called on the legislators to "acknowledge" the state of a national emergency because the international situation is now "far more grave than a year ago" when the draft law was enacted.

The chief executive, in a special message, informed both houses that it "would be a tragic error" to curtail the training of Selectees and Guardsmen at the conclusion of the 12 months.

"Today it is imperative that I should officially report to the Congress," asserted the President, "what the Congress undoubtedly knows: That the international situation is not less grave but is far more grave than it was a year ago."

"It is so grave, in my opinion, and in the opinion of all who are conversant with the facts, that the Army should be maintained in effective strength and without diminution of its effective numbers in a complete state of readiness. Small as it is in comparison with other armies, it should not suffer any form of disorganization or disintegration."

Simultaneously President Roosevelt promised that Selectees and Guardsmen who have reached the age of 28 will be transferred from active service to reserve status as rapidly as possible.

Tracing the time table conquests of Germany, which he declared successfully brought the issue of Nazi domination closer to this Hemisphere, the President said the danger to the United States' safety is much greater today than it was a year ago when Congress put 12-month limit in training.

"I do believe—I know—that the danger today is infinitely greater," he said. "I do believe—I know—that in all truth we are in the midst of a national emergency."

"I am not asking the Congress for specific language in a specific bill. But I can say frankly that I hope the Congress will acknowledge this national emergency either for a specific period or until revocation by the Congress or the President."

Declaration by Congress of a state of national emergency would have the effect of giving President Roosevelt a full vote of confidence for all actions he has taken to date under the emergency he declared by proclamation.

Further, such a congressional declaration would enable the President to retain Selectees, Guardsmen and Reserve Officers in training for the period of emergency and give him authority to send them any where in the world he deemed it necessary in the interest of National Defense.

Take Grave Risk
The President warned solemnly that "we would be taking a grave national risk unless the Congress were to make it possible for us to maintain our present full effective strength and during the coming year give training to as many additional Americans as we can."

The chief executive further more told the legislative branch that the United States has a definite responsibility to every other

TWO ARMY MEN LOST EN ROUTE TO KELLY FIELD

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 21—Some forty southeastern air corps planes combed the area between Montgomery and Jackson, Miss., today, in search of Major Fred S. Stocks and Captain William S. Hargen, missing since Saturday on a flight from Fort Benning, Ga., to Kelly Field, Texas.

Army authorities here predicted an early announcement on the fate of the fliers, but no clues as to their whereabouts had been reported. The plane's fuel supply could not have carried it beyond Jackson, Miss.

The missing ship was one of three which took off on a scheduled flight from Fort Benning, to Kelly Field, Texas. Two planes, piloted by Col. Warner B. Gates, commanding officer of the field, and Lieut. Charles E. Blanchard Jr., returned to Fort Benning after the formation had become separated by bad weather conditions.

Last contact with the missing fliers was said to have been a radio report from Major Stocks to Maxwell Field, in which he reported that he was near that field.

Month Of War Finds Answer To Queries About Russians

By Captain John H. Craig

U. S. Marine Corps, Retired
A month of Titanic, battles on the Western Russian Front has torn the veils of mystery from the Soviets' much discussed Red army. For fifteen years the goodness or badness of this force has been the hottest subject of debate in all the general staff offices and Army-Navy Clubs of the world.

Grey-haired generals would grow red-faced and apoplectic arguing over whether Communist soldiers could or would fight. For a dime a dozen you could get the most diametrically opposite opinions on the subject from sources that ought to have been best informed. Some said the Red army was the world's greatest. Others said it was an utter flop. Truth was that nobody knew. There was much theory, but no proof.

Now, after four weeks of fighting, the wraps are off. There isn't much doubt left in military circles as to the Red army's strengths and weaknesses. Red air force, tank divisions and infantry have been tried in the furnace of war and their qualities established so as to leave little room for argument.

Facts concerning the Red army revealed by a month of war add up to the classic verdict of Napoleon on another Russian army of another

WASHINGTON, July 21—The Labor Department today confirmed that it was conducting a survey of local wage scales and labor conditions in Pickaway County, Ohio, for the War Department, with the possibility that some sort of an arms or defense industry soon may be located there.

A spokesman said letters had been sent to contractors, labor leaders and officials of other government departments in an effort to obtain complete data on local conditions. The survey, it was said, centered on the area between Circleville, the county seat, and Williamsport, ten miles west.

Simultaneously President Roosevelt promised that Selectees and Guardsmen who have reached the age of 28 will be transferred from active service to reserve status as rapidly as possible.

Conquests Traced

Tracing the time table conquests of Germany, which he declared successfully brought the issue of Nazi domination closer to this Hemisphere, the President said the danger to the United States' safety is much greater today than it was a year ago when Congress put 12-month limit in training.

"I do believe—I know—that the danger today is infinitely greater," he said. "I do believe—I know—that in all truth we are in the midst of a national emergency."

"I am not asking the Congress for specific language in a specific bill. But I can say frankly that I hope the Congress will acknowledge this national emergency either for a specific period or until revocation by the Congress or the President."

Declaration by Congress of a state of national emergency would have the effect of giving President Roosevelt a full vote of confidence for all actions he has taken to date under the emergency he declared by proclamation.

Further, such a congressional declaration would enable the President to retain Selectees, Guardsmen and Reserve Officers in training for the period of emergency and give him authority to send them anywhere in the world he deemed it necessary in the interest of National Defense.

Take Grave Risk

The President warned solemnly that "we would be taking a grave national risk unless the Congress were to make it possible for us to maintain our present full effective strength and during the coming year give training to as many additional Americans as we can."

The chief executive further urged the legislative branch that the United States has a definite responsibility to every other

NATIONAL BANK GUARD LOOTS PARKING METERS

PITTSBURGH, July 21—John Miller, a guard in the Mellon National Bank for 16 years, today was arrested on a charge of robbing downtown Pittsburgh parking meters of nickels and pennies.

Detectives who seized Miller reported seeing him loot four meters. They said they found 48 pennies, 32 nickels and a key to the meter boxes in his pocket.

WAR TODAY

Month Of War Finds Answer To Queries About Russians

By Captain John H. Craig U. S. Marine Corps, Retired

A month of Titanic, battles on the Western Russian Front has torn the veils of mystery from the Soviets' much discussed Red army. For fifteen years the goodness or badness of this force has been the hottest subject of debate in all the general staff offices and Army-Navy Clubs of the world.

Grey-haired generals would grow red-faced and apoplectic arguing over whether Communist soldiers could or would fight. For a dime a dozen you could get the most diametrically opposite opinions on the subject from sources that ought to have been best informed. Some said the Red army was the world's greatest. Others said it was an utter flop. Truth was that nobody knew. There was much theory, but no proof.

Now, after four weeks of fighting, the wraps are off. There isn't much doubt left in military circles as to the Red army's strengths and weaknesses. Red air force, tank divisions and infantry have been tried in the furnace of war and their qualities established so as to leave little room for argument.

Facts concerning the Red army revealed by a month of war add up to the classic verdict of Napoleon on another Russian army of another day.

TWO ARMY MEN LOST EN ROUTE TO KELLY FIELD

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 21—Some forty southeastern air corps planes combed the area between Montgomery and Jackson, Miss., today, in search of Major Fred S. Stocks and Captain William S. Hargen, missing since Saturday on a flight from Fort Benning, Ga., to Kelly Field, Texas.

Army authorities here predicted an early announcement on the fate of the fliers, but no clues as to their whereabouts had been reported. The plane's fuel supply could not have carried it beyond Jackson, Miss.

The missing ship was one of three which took off on a scheduled flight from Fort Benning, to Kelly Field, Texas. Two planes, piloted by Col. Warner B. Gates, commanding officer of the field, and Lieut. Charles E. Blanchard Jr., returned to Fort Benning after the formation had become separated by bad weather conditions.

Last contact with the missing fliers was said to have been a radio report from Major Stocks to Maxwell Field, in which he reported that he was near that field.

MORE TRAINING ASKED BY F. D. R. FOR SOLDIERS

country in the Western Hemisphere—which responsibility would be dissolved if the army was to be weakened by inadequate training. "To weaken our Army at this particular time would be, in my judgment, an act of bad faith toward our neighbors," he said.

Mr. Roosevelt recognized the personal sacrifices which the many thousands of Selectees, Guardsmen and Reservists are making, but he expressed confidence that the men in the ranks of the Army "realize far better than does the general public the disastrous effect" of permitting the army "to melt away."

He said it was not surprising that millions of patriotic Americans find it difficult to disrupt their normal lives but he noted that "it is hard for most of us to bring events many thousands of miles away into focus with our ready-accepted and normal democratic ways of living."

"That is why I must refer again to the sequence of conquests—German conquests or attacks—which have continued uninterruptedly through several years all the way from the coup against Austria to the present campaign in Russia," the President continued.

There is evidence of wide dissemination in congress on the proposals to keep draftees in service "for the duration." Party lines are split, and a bitter fight is foreseen, even in the face of the President's message.

Out of senatorial discussion appeared one proposal which seemed to gain headway—a plan to "freeze" the army at 1,700,000 men.

This proposal was based on the testimony of Gen. Marshall that the Army can defend the Western Hemisphere with that number of men, armed and equipped to fight a modern war.

"I am hopeful that an amendment to this effect will be offered," said Sen. Downey (D) Calif.

In outlining problems the Army faces, Gen. Marshall explained that the Army enlisted strength now is 1,400,000 men, it is authorized to exceed this figure by adding 152,000 to the Air Corps, and he seeks approximately 150,000 more regulars.

The "freezing" plan would also have the effect of curbing the War Department's recommendation for an unlimited authorized draft army, by removing present legal restrictions which limit the number of draftees in training to 900,000 men.

Bonus Payment Asked

The California senator also voiced optimism over chances of adoption of his proposed amendment to pay draftees, guardsmen and reservists a $30 monthly bonus for continuation of service beyond one year. The bonus would not be paid until the men were discharged.

"A number of senators have spoken to me in approval of the idea," said Downey. "I am especially anxious to provide a fund to aid the boys in rehabilitating themselves in civil life."

He suggested that a tax to raise the $360,000,000 estimated annual cost of the plan would also have the effect of reducing consumptive demand, and thus contribute to stabilization of the financial situation.

A final agreement between Senate and House conferees on the bill which defers men above 28 from the draft was in prospect as conferees were called to an afternoon conference.

Only difference between Senate and House is that the Senate made the deferment discretionary while the House made it mandatory. The Senate version was considered likely to be approved.

A battle looms, however, over provisions of the Senate bill authorizing the President to seize strike-bound plants, which was provided in the Connally amendment, and the Byrd amendment condemning strikes in defense industries.

Last Chance

Sen. Connally (D) Tex., author of the plant seizure amendment, expressed hope that it would be restored to the bill. It was knocked out in the House.

"This is the last chance for any legislation to help curb strikes," said Connally.

Organized labor opposed both the Connally and Byrd amendments.

In conformity with the President's message to Congress, retention of draftees would affect 126 Pickaway County draftees, according to local Selective Service officials.

The local board said Monday it had been given no information on how passage of such legislation would affect its future quota.

Whether future quotas would stop if the law became effective or whether men would continue to be drawn from the county was not known.

the Red army's man-power and equipment "seem endless."

German war correspondents at the fighting front reported:

"The Bolsheviks have more tanks than lice. We are busy getting rid of both."

Southern Push Gains

German authorities declared the push to the south from Lake Ladoga on the northern front is rapidly narrowing the distance of this force from the German force advancing from Lake Peipus for the planned encirclement of Leningrad. They added that large Soviet military units have now been cut off and isolated in northern Estonia.

On military expert, Herr Stackelberg, in a "preview" of the war's next stage, declared:

"A man hunt is coming and, because of broken rear communications and transportation the Soviets will not be able to retreat so fast that our Panzers and planes cannot catch them."

"Germany is also a master at pursuing a beaten foe to a point where he is annihilated or forced to capitulate."

RAF HITS LILLE IN MAJOR RAID

Nazi-occupied Dutch port of Rotterdam.

Other British bombers last night battered ntw German defenses established on the French coast cliffs near Cap Gris Nez and positions close to Boulogne. It was believed the new British daylight raids continued pounding these positions.

According to an Air Ministry communique the industrial Rhine-land city of Cologne was the principal objective of a sustained RAF attack during the night.

Many large fires were started in industrial areas of Cologne, the communique said, adding that the attack on the Rotterdam docks was a "subsidiary" assault.

No British planes were lost, the announcement stated.

(An official Berlin announcement said "weak RAF forces" raided western Germany during the night, causing a few casualties and some damage to residential districts.)

Nazi raiders during the night dropped bombs on several points in eastern England and two places in southern Scotland. The Air Ministry said there were a number of casualties and some damage.

Describing operation in the battle areas covering the defenses of Leningrad, Moscow and Kiev, the communique stated:

"At one point a Red army infantry division surrounded and annihilated a large enemy motorized formation, capturing 189 trucks, five tanks, four armored cars, two planes and six heavy guns."

"At another point our troops surrounded a concentration of enemy tanks and destroyed 300 enemy trucks and two divisions of heavy artillery."

The communique said heavy fighting continued in the Pskov, Polotsk, Smolensk and Novograd-Volynsk sectors.

On the Pskov sector guarding Leningrad, the communique indicated, the Germans renewed their furious attacks, but were meeting implacable resistance.

tempted assault but freed on a suspended sentence. District Attorney Bradford disclosed. He was awaiting grand jury action in September on still another sex charge.

22 Wounds Found

Medical authorities said that the Shipp girl had been brutally beaten. District Attorney Bradford reported that there were 22 groups of wounds, administered apparently with a wedge-like instrument. Dr. Allan R. Moritz, medical examiner, said that she had not been killed outright. How long she had remained alive could not immediately be determined.

The Shipp girl had been missing since Tuesday before the discovery of her body was made. Miss Cochran had been missing since Thursday night. An acquaintance told of seeing her get into an automobile, driven by a man, a short distance from her home. Her parents said under no circumstances would she have done so had she not been well acquainted with him.

Miss Cochran's mutilated body, with a branch of a tree rammed down her throat, was found following a mysterious telephone call to a radio station. "A woman's body can be found on the Danvers road," a man's voice said. The connection was broken before the call could be traced. Medical authorities said the body had been dragged a considerable distance before being dumped along the roadside.

Eventually, the British hope, the written, spoken and telegraphed "V" will be transmuted into open rebellion.

(Editor's Note: Howard K. Smith, CBS correspondent in Berlin, reported by air today that a huge "V" has appeared on the Eiffel tower in Paris. Chancellor Hitler's newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter published a picture of a 30-foot "V" painted on the cobble of the streets of Prague. The big question of the day for correspondents in Berlin, Smith said, is: "What does the 'V' stand for?")

6,000 Arrests Made

The fact that Goebbels has appropriated the "V" British informants said, will simplify matters for pro-British elements in various occupied countries. Pointing out that more than 6,000 "V" arrests were reported last week in Paris alone, they said that persons taken into custody in the future would merely have to say they had painted "V" for a German "Viktoria" instead of for a British victory.

Numerous cases of sabotage were reported. A 22-car German munitions train was reported blown up near Presov, Czechoslovakia, while an 11-car special train carrying workmen to Germany from Italy was derailed with heavy loss of life. Most observers in London believed these incidents were more than coincidence.

LEW FIELDS OF FAMOUS COMEDY DUO DIES AT 74

HOLLYWOOD, July 21—The amusement world today mourned the passing of Lew Fields of the famous vaudeville comedy team of Weber and Fields.

The veteran comedian died yesterday at his Beverly Hills home after an illness of four days. He was 74. Death was due to pneumonia.

With Fields when the end came were his wife, Rose, his children, and his partner of more than 60 years, Joe Weber.

"We were profoundly affected," Weber was quoted as saying. "He was everything to me."

The comedians were mere boys—Fields was only 9—when they began their comedy antics that delighted and convulsed American audiences for more than six decades. They made their first appearance at a ball in New York in 1876 and followed this, a year later, with a formal stage debut, in juvenile Dutch sketches.

Nine years later they had risen to sufficient prominence.

'V' FOR VICTORY SUCCESS CITED

Goebbels Also Employs Symbol; Major Acts Of Espionage Claimed

LONDON, July 21—British authorities claimed overwhelming success today in the "V for Victory" campaign as reports from the European continent emphasized the swiftly-spreading appearance of Britain's single-lettered slogan of hope and eventual triumph.

Brendan Bracken, newly appointed minister of information, and others of his staff were far from discouraged over the fact that Propaganda Minister Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels has appropriated the "V" for German purposes.

No one, it was said, will be misled by sudden substitution of the archaic German word "Viktoria" for the "Sieg" which has been drummed into Nazidom as the word for victory. Goebbels' action is merely proof to Britain of the extent to which people in the occupied countries are using every possible occasion to display the letter and thus demonstrate their true feelings.

Eventually, the British hope, the written, spoken and telegraphed "V" will be transmuted into open rebellion.

(Editor's Note: Howard K. Smith, CBS correspondent in Berlin, reported by air today that a huge "V" has appeared on the Eiffel tower in Paris. the Red army's man-power and equipment "seem endless."

German war correspondents at the fighting front reported:

"The Bolsheviks have more tanks than lice. We are busy getting rid of both."

Southern Push Gains

German authorities declared the push to the south from Lake Ladoga on the northern front is rapidly narrowing the distance of this force from the German force advancing from Lake Peipus for the planned encirclement of Leningrad. They added that large Soviet military units have now been cut off and isolated in northern Estonia.

On military expert, Herr Stackelberg, in a "preview" of the war's next stage, declared:

"A man hunt is coming and, because of broken rear communications and transportation the Soviets will not be able to retreat so fast that our Panzers and planes cannot catch them."

"Germany is also a master at pursuing a beaten foe to a point where he is annihilated or forced to capitulate."

Russians Report Bitter Fighting

MOSCOW, July 21—Heavy fighting on the fronts where Nazi forces are attempting offensives against Moscow and Kiev was announced by the Russian high command in a new war communique today.

The statement also said 31 German planes were destroyed in air battles yesterday.

"During the night there was stubborn fighting in the directions of Polotsk-Nevel, Smolensk and Novograd Volynsk," the communique said.

"Elsewhere there were no large-scale operations."

"Thirty-one enemy planes were destroyed yesterday."

A previous communique announced annihilation of a large force of German motorized troops and destruction of German artillery sufficient to equip two divisions.

This announcement said violent fighting continued on four major fronts and added that Russian guerrillas behind the German lines were inflicting "heavy losses" on the Nazis.

(Editor's Note: A dispatch by Alexander Werth, special Moscow correspondent for the Reuters (British) news agency, stated that despite foreign reports to the contrary the Soviet capital has not yet experienced any air raids.)

The Soviet communique also claimed destruction of 25 German planes "in the first part of Sunday" and the aerial sinking of a German torpedo boat in the Baltic Sea.

Communique Quoted

Describing operation in the battle areas covering the defenses of Leningrad, Moscow and Kiev, the communique stated:

"At one point a Red army infantry division surrounded and annihilated a large enemy motorized formation, capturing 189 trucks, five tanks, four armored cars, two planes and six heavy guns."

"At another point our troops surrounded a concentration of enemy tanks and destroyed 300 enemy trucks and two divisions of heavy artillery."

The communique said heavy fighting continued in the Pskov, Polotsk-Nevel, Smolensk and Novograd-Volynsk sectors.

On the Pskov sector guarding Leningrad, the communique indicated, the Germans renewed their furious attacks, but were meeting implacable resistance.

tempted assault but freed on a suspended sentence. District Attorney Bradford disclosed. He was awaiting grand jury action in September on still another sex charge.

22 Wounds Found

Medical authorities said that the Shipp girl had been brutally beaten. District Attorney Bradford reported that there were 22 groups of wounds, administered apparently with a wedge-like instrument. Dr. Allan R. Moritz, medical examiner, said that she had not been killed outright. How long she had remained alive could not immediately be determined.

The Shipp girl had been missing since Tuesday before the discovery of her body was made. Miss Cochran had been missing since Thursday night. An acquaintance told of seeing her get into an automobile, driven by a man, a short distance from her home. Her parents said under no circumstances would she have done so had she not been well acquainted with him.

Miss Cochran's mutilated body, with a branch of a tree rammed down her throat, was found following a mysterious telephone call to a radio station. "A woman's body can be found on the Danvers road," a man's voice said. The connection was broken before the call could be traced. Medical authorities said the body had been dragged a considerable distance before being dumped along the roadside.

Eventually, the British hope, the written, spoken and telegraphed "V" will be transmuted into open rebellion.

(Editor's Note: Howard K. Smith, CBS correspondent in Berlin, reported by air today that a huge "V" has appeared on the Eiffel tower in Paris. The big question of the day for correspondents in Berlin, Smith said, is: "What does the 'V' stand for?")

Nazi-occupied Dutch port of Rotterdam.

Other British bombers last night battered new German defenses established on the French coast cliffs near Cap Gris Nez and positions close to Boulogne. It was believed the new British daylight raids continued pounding these positions.

According to an Air Ministry communique the industrial Rhine-land city of Cologne was the principal objective of a sustained RAF attack during the night.

Many large fires were started in industrial areas of Cologne, the communique said, adding that the attack on the Rotterdam docks was a "subsidiary" assault.

No British planes were lost, the announcement stated.

(An official Berlin announcement said "weak RAF forces" raided western Germany during the night, causing a few casualties and some damage to residential districts.)

Nazi raiders during the night dropped bombs on several points in eastern England and two places in southern Scotland. The Air Ministry said there were a number of casualties and some damage.

'V' FOR VICTORY SUCCESS CITED

Goebbels Also Employs Symbol; Major Acts Of Espionage Claimed

LONDON, July 21—British authorities claimed overwhelming success today in the "V for Victory" campaign as reports from the European continent emphasized the swiftly-spreading appearance of Britain's single-lettered slogan of hope and eventual triumph.

Brendan Bracken, newly appointed minister of information, and others of his staff were far from discouraged over the fact that Propaganda Minister Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels has appropriated the "V" for German purposes.

No one, it was said, will be misled by sudden substitution of the archaic German word "Viktoria" for the "Sieg" which has been drummed into Britain of the extent to which people in the occupied countries are using every possible occasion to display the letter and thus demonstrate their true feelings.

Eventually, the British hope, the written, spoken and telegraphed "V" will be transmuted into open rebellion.

(Editor's Note: Howard K. Smith, CBS correspondent in Berlin, reported by air today that a huge "V" has appeared on the Eiffel tower in Paris. Chancellor Hitler's newspaper Voelkischer Beobachter published a picture of a 30-foot "V" painted on the cobble of the streets of Prague. The big question of the day for correspondents in Berlin, Smith said, is: "What does the 'V' stand for?")

6,000 Arrests Made

The fact that Goebbels has appropriated the "V" British informants said, will simplify matters for pro-British elements in various occupied countries. Pointing out that more than 6,000 "V" arrests were reported last week in Paris alone, they said that persons taken into custody in the future would merely have to say they had painted "V" for a German "Viktoria" instead of for a British victory.

Numerous cases of sabotage were reported. A 22-car German munitions train was reported blown up near Presov, Czechoslovakia, while an 11-car special train carrying workmen to Germany from Italy was derailed with heavy loss of life. Most observers in London believed these incidents were more than coincidence.

LEW FIELDS OF FAMOUS COMEDY DUO DIES AT 74

HOLLYWOOD, July 21—The amusement world today mourned the passing of Lew Fields of the famous vaudeville comedy team of Weber and Fields.

The veteran comedian died yesterday at his Beverly Hills home after an illness of four days. He was 74. Death was due to pneumonia.

With Fields when the end came were his wife, Rose, his children, and his partner of more than 60 years, Joe Weber.

Weber was profoundly affected. "We grew up together," he said. "He was everything to me."

The comedians were mere boys—Fields was only 9—when they began their comedy antics that delighted and convulsed American audiences for more than six decades. They made their first appearance at a ball in New York in 1876 and followed this, a year later, with a formal stage debut, in juvenile Dutch sketches.

Nine years later they had risen to sufficient prominence.

other day, "the more it changes the more it remains the same." After a century and a quarter of wars and a major social revolution the Russian army remains today much as the little corporal found it.

Valorous, Numberless

Virtues of the Russian army today as in Napoleon's time are the fanatical valor of its soldiers and the huge masses of men it is able to put into the field. Its weakness now as then is the stolidity and ignorance of its lower officers and the men in its ranks. Time has not altered these conditions, but ignorance is a much more costly defect in the war of today than it was in that of 125 years ago.

It is difficult for the inhabitants of the United States with the background of the world's greatest educational system, to comprehend conditions in the country from which the Russian army springs. Among the old upper classes and in high bureaucratic circles today are to be found the highest levels of education, sophistication and intelligence. Among the masses was and apparently is ignorance almost inconceivable.

Consequently the Russian army through its military history has been one of tremendous contrasts. Many of its higher officers have been brilliant.

Kuropatkin, the czar's military brain-truster of the 1890s, was pronounced by the elder Moltke to possess the best military mind since Napoleon. Brusiloff, of World War fame, was one of the most capable generals that participated in that struggle.

But Russian private soldiers of World War vintage were densely ignorant. The writer of this column remembers being informed with pride by the colonel of a crack Imperial Guard regiment that all his non-commissioned officers could read and write. The bolts of Russian rifles of the day were made extra heavy so that powerful but clumsy fingers could not tear them apart.

Countries Differ

In Russia, no general understanding of machinery exists, such as is found in America. Almost every American boy learns to drive and repair the family car. Most complicated mechanical device is a wheel-barrow. Stories flitting back in military circles tell how this handicaps the Soviets' armies. When the pilot and co-pilot of a tank are killed other members of the crew can seldom drive and the tank is lost. Or if a slight defect disables a motor vehicle, its crew is unable to make repairs.

Written orders are often uncomprehended. In the days of the Czar less than one in ten of the Russians could read and write. The Soviets made energetic efforts to change this, but twenty years is not enough to educate a nation. Recent Soviet statistics show that only 9,391,718 children out of approximately 50,000,000 of school age were attending school. That is less than one in five, and may perhaps have been exaggerated for propaganda purposes at that.

Columbus Men To Install 10 New Drives, Provide Other Sports

School Board Has Problem With Basketball Gym No Longer Available

Columbus interests represented by Charles Horvath and Kenneth Kearney are planning to spend $35,000 in remodeling the Circleville Athletic Club gymnasium, making it into a modern 10-drive bowling alley and establishing an up-to-date restaurant in the building.

The Columbus men are intending to make the C. A. C. property a recreation center, with other sports to be provided in the basement, now occupied by the bowling alleys, and in the present gymnasium where the bowling alleys will be placed.

Announcement was made Sunday by the Zinn Co., Columbus realty firm which bought the C. A. C. property and then sold it to the Columbus men, that the remodeled layout would be ready for occupancy about September 1.

During the last few years four bowling alleys have been available in the C. A. C. gymnasium basement. It is expected that new owners will soon start a drive to organize leagues for participation in fall and winter seasons.

School Board Problem

Sale of the property to the Columbus interests raises a problem for the Circleville board of education since the gymnasium will no longer be available for high school basketball games. At present, the only facilities are at the high school in the band-box gymnasium provided there.

CAC To Organize Tuesday Evening

Circleville Athletic Club members will reorganize, elect new officers and adopt new by-laws when they meet Tuesday night at 8 o'clock in their new club rooms on the second floor of the Bales building on East Main Street.

Invitations have been sent to over 100 old and new club members to attend the meeting. Orwell Barr, secretary of the club, said.

Established in its new club rooms, the Athletic Club has two large rooms, both newly furnished, available for club members. Reading, lounging and recreational facilities will be provided as soon as the club is completely organized.

The club was forced to vacate its old club rooms on East Main Street two weeks ago when it sold its property to the Zinn Company in Columbus.

CITY CAMPAIGN FOR ALUMINUM UNDER WAY NOW

Circleville opened its Aluminum Campaign Monday along with thousands of other cities throughout the state and nation. The campaign will close Tuesday, July 29.

During the drive, residents of Circleville will be asked to donate their old aluminum ware for national defense.

Boy and Girl Scouts have agreed to assist with the campaign and will start a house to house collection Wednesday morning. Boy and Girl Scouts will meet at the City Building Wednesday at 9 a. m., where they will be assigned to various sections of the city.

Service Director Leonard Morgan is in charge of the local drive. When the aluminum has been collected it will be taken to Columbus, collection center for 17 counties in central Ohio.

VFW Band Provides Fine Village Entertainment

By S. D. Fridley
Phone, Ashville 79

The V. F. W. band under the direction of its teacher and leader, Fred Hines, gave a splendid hour an a half concert in the usual location at corner Long and Main, Saturday evening. The three majorities, the Misses Smith, Bowers and Campbell, played a prominent part in the entertainment, handling those batons as if they knew all about it. The bronze trophy awarded Miss Smith for winning first place in a majorette contest by the veterans at a recent state meet at the Capital City, occupied a prominent place in

"Brinks" display window and was admired by many. It represents a majorette in action and is an artistic and beautiful piece of work.

But the really amusing part of all of it, to us, was what a young man, in his hearing, said to his chum while they were viewing the three majorettes in action. "Say," he said, "I don't believe I'd want to hook up with one of them as a life partner, cause you'd stand no show in an argument with a rolling pin or fire poker coming at you like that."

And we agreed with the youngster and complimented him for seeing that far around the corner. And just how to make a broom handle do all this twirling, fancy stuff, is supplying good exercise for a lot of our local lassies, even classes being formed and everything. This band, Director Hines told us, has two near at hand dates to fill, the first at our old home town of Marcy, the 31st, and the second at Commercial Point, Saturday, August 2.

HOLIDAY CRASH BASIS FOR BIG DAMAGE ACTION

West Virginian Blames Columbus Physician For Wife's Death

$25,000 BEING SOUGHT

Early Morning Collision On July 4 Recalled By Petition

A $25,000 damage action was filed Saturday in Franklin County Common Pleas court, Columbus, by Emery Rhoads, Red House, W. Va., against Dr. Edward R. Schumacher, 303 Beck Street, Columbus, whom he blames for causing the traffic death of Mrs. Rhoads on Route 23 north of Circleville.

The wreck happened at 7 a. m. on July 4.

Rhoads' wife, Gladys, 36, died of a broken neck at the scene of the collision five miles north of Circleville. Rhoads suffered from a broken nose and broken left leg, and Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey Edwards, also of Red House, who were riding in the same car, received numerous injuries in the wreck.

Sheriff's deputies said after the collision that they had been informed that Schumacher, who was reported to be on his way to begin service in a southern army camp after serving internship at an Indiana hospital, pulled from the line of traffic and started to go around a truck, his car moving into the lane occupied by the West Virginian automobile and causing a terrific head-on crash.

Schumacher was taken to a Columbus hospital by a passerby, the physician also being seriously hurt.

promised to intervene with the State Department.

The State Department, however, insisted that the French would agree to send one of their ships to the United States for every ship we sent to North African waters, so they over-ruled both the Maritime Commission and the British.

What influenced the State Department was a report from Robert Murphy, counselor of the American Embassy in Vichy, who had taken a special trip to North Africa to see Marshal Weygand. He reported that if the United States would send French ships loaded with U. S. goods, Weygand would permit American observers to remain at Dakar, and would not oust American consuls from French Africa, even if Hitler demanded it.

History can prove whether the State Department is justified. But meanwhile both the British and the Maritime Commission have very definite views which they are not waiting for history to express.

$35,000 TO BE SPENT ON C.A.C. BOWLING ALLEY

Columbus Men To Install 10 New Drives, Provide Other Sports

TO BE READY SEPT. 1

School Board Has Problem With Basketball Gym No Longer Available

Columbus interests represented by Charles Horvath and Kenneth Kearney are planning to spend $35,000 in remodeling the Circleville Athletic Club gymnasium, making it into a modern 10-drive bowling alley and establishing an up-to-date restaurant in the building.

The Columbus men are intending to make the C. A. C. property a recreation center, with other sports to be provided in the basement, now occupied by the bowling alleys, and in the present gymnasium where the bowling alleys will be placed.

Announcement was made Sunday by the Zinn Co., Columbus realty firm which bought the C. A. C. property and then sold it to the Columbus men, that the remodeled layout would be ready for occupancy about September 1.

During the last few years four bowling alleys have been available in the C. A. C. gymnasium basement. It is expected that new owners will soon start a drive to organize leagues for participation in fall and winter seasons.

School Board Problem

Sale of the property to the Columbus interests raises a problem for the Circleville board of education since the gymnasium will no longer be available for high school basketball games. At present, the only facilities are at the high school in the band-box gymnasium provided there.

CAC To Organize Tuesday Evening

Circleville Athletic Club members will reorganize, elect new officers and adopt new by-laws when they meet Tuesday night at 8 o'clock in their new club rooms on the second floor of the Bales building on East Main Street.

Invitations have been sent to over 100 old and new club members to attend the meeting. Orwell Barr, secretary of the club, said.

Established in its new club rooms, the Athletic Club has two large rooms, both newly furnished, available for club members. Reading, lounging and recreational facilities will be provided as soon as the club is completely organized.

The club was forced to vacate its old club rooms on East Main Street two weeks ago when it sold its property to the Zinn Company in Columbus.

CITY CAMPAIGN FOR ALUMINUM UNDER WAY NOW

Circleville opened its Aluminum Campaign Monday along with thousands of other cities throughout the state and nation. The campaign will close Tuesday, July 29.

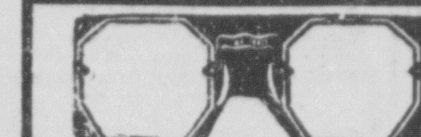

During the drive, residents of Circleville will be asked to donate their old aluminum ware for national defense.

Boy and Girl Scouts have agreed to assist with the campaign and will start a house to house collection Wednesday morning. Boy and Girl Scouts will meet at the City Building Wednesday at 9 a. m., where they will be assigned to various sections of the city.

Service Director Leonard Morgan is in charge of the local drive. When the aluminum has been collected it will be taken to Columbus, collection center for 17 counties in central Ohio.

VFW Band Provides Fine Village Entertainment

By S. D. Fridley
Phone, Ashville 79

The V. F. W. band under the direction of its teacher and leader, Fred Hines, gave a splendid hour on a half concert in the usual location at corner Long and Main, Saturday evening. The three majorettes, the Misses Smith, Bowers and Campbell, played a prominent part in the entertainment, handling those batons as if they knew all about it. The bronze trophy awarded Miss Smith for winning first place in a majorette contest at the Capital City, occupied a prominent place in "Brink's" display window and was admired by many. It represents a majorette in action and is an artistic and beautiful piece of work. But the really amusing part of all of it, to us, was what a young man, in my hearing, said to his three majorettes in action. "Say," he said, "I don't believe I'd want to hook up with one of them as a life partner, cause you'd stand no show in an argument with a rolling pin or fire poker coming at you like that."

And we agreed with the youngster and complimented him for seeing that far around the corner. And just how to make a broom handle do all this twirling, fancy stuff, is supplying good exercise for a lot of our local lassies, even classes being formed and everything. This band, Director Hines told us, has two near at hand dates to fill, the first at our old home town of Marcy, the 31st, and the second at Commercial Point, Saturday, August 2.

Prof. Fred Brobst, who teaches a couple of instrumental music classes in the local school, and residing now in the Capital City, was circulating around here Saturday evening trying to find some sort of dwelling, so he could locate here with his family. Think we have them located by crowding a little.

The applicant-bidders for the postoffice carrying job, three trips daily between office and depot, are yet on the increase with prospects good for reaching the dozen. Five-thirty (5:30) this evening, is the "deadline" hour for receiving bids.

The trip of the Walnut F. F. A. boys has been shortened because of the smaller number of boys being able to go. The present trip will be through the Blue Grass region of Kentucky to Chattanooga.

HOLIDAY CRASH BASIS FOR BIG DAMAGE ACTION

West Virginian Blames Columbus Physician For Wife's Death

$25,000 BEING SOUGHT

Early Morning Collision On July 4 Recalled By Petition

A $25,000 damage action was filed Saturday in Franklin County Common Pleas court, Columbus, by Emery Rhoads, Red House, W. Va., against Dr. Edward R. Schumacher, 303 Beck Street, Columbus, whom he blames for causing the traffic death of Mrs. Rhoads on Route 23 north of Circleville.

The wreck happened at 7 a. m. on July 4.

Rhoads' wife, Gladys, 36, died of a broken neck at the scene of the collision five miles north of Circleville. Rhoads suffered from a broken nose and broken left leg, and Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey Edwards, also of Red House, were riding in the same car, received numerous injuries in the wreck.

Sheriff's deputies said after the collision that they had been informed that Schumacher, who was reported to be on his way to begin service in a southern army camp after serving Internship at an Indiana hospital, pulled from the line of traffic and started to go around a truck, his car moving into the lane occupied by the West Virginia automobile and causing a terrific head-on crash.

Schumacher was taken to a Columbus hospital by a passerby, the physician also being seriously hurt.

History can prove whether the State Department is justified. But meanwhile both the British and the Maritime Commission have very definite views which they are not waiting for history to express.

FRENCH OIL TANKERS

What particularly incenses the British is that the State Department is allowing two tankers to load up with American oil and aviation gasoline. This will permit the 300-to-400 grounded airplanes in Morocco to be used—possibly against the British.

In the end, the British decided not to make a last ditch fight. "We have so many other problems of major importance to settle," they told friends, "that we don't think it is best to object further to this."

What the Maritime Commission and Secretary Ickes covet most are the nine French oil tankers now gathering barnacles in the harbor of Martinique.

The Maritime Commission proposes chartering them and if necessary paying good hard dollars to the French. These tankers making one trip a month with oil from Venezuela, could carry 560,000 barrels a month, which would practically remove Secretary Ickes' fears of an oil shortage.

But desperately as oil is needed on the Atlantic Coast, the State Department leans over backward not to offend the French.

CIRCLEVILLE OIL COMPANY IN ITS TWENTIETH YEAR

The Circleville Oil Company, in its twentieth year as a Circleville and Pickaway County home-owned and home-operated industry, has risen in that time from a small concern to one of the district's bigger businesses.

The company was started in 1922 and was incorporated in 1924, with the late Glenn I. Nickerson as the leading figure in its early progress. It now has 40 stockholders, who only recently received a substantial dividend, and its officers include R. L. Brehmer, president; Roy Cromley, vice-president; C. R. Barnhart, secretary-treasurer, and Leslie D. May, general manager. Mrs. Helen Gunning is bookkeeper.

The Circleville Oil Company operates one of central Ohio's most modern service stations at 301 North Court Street, and maintains a bulk station on West Mound Street, this property having been the first office location of the firm. The company has 16 dealers in the Circleville trading area handling its products.

Fleetwing Corporation gasoline and by-products are handled by the company, the Fleetwing unit being a subsidiary of Standard Oil Company of Ohio.

Mr. May said Monday that state records show the company's gallonage to be above that of any other gasoline dispenser serving Pickaway County.

Fourteen employees are on the Circleville Oil Company payroll, with five trucks operating. Four of the employees, including Mr. May, William Carter and Theodore and Arthur Steele, have been on the payroll since the company's organization.

Ralph A. Francis Leaves Scioto School for New Position At Kingston

Announcement was made Monday of the resignation of Ralph A. Francis, superintendent of Scioto Township school at Commercial Point. Mr. Francis has accepted the superintendency of Kingston-Union schools, succeeding Harvey Darst, who was hired the latter part of June.

Darst requested that he be relieved of contract agreements after Jackson Township school board in Darke County where he has been employed voted him a salary increase if he would remain there. Darst had been employed at Kingston to take the place of John E. Neiderhouser, former superintendent at Gambier, who also had resigned after being hired, a book company offer being more attractive.

HOCKING FARMERS FOR GOVERNMENT PROGRAM

LOGAN, July 21—On the whole, farmers in Hocking County are practically 100 percent within the federal regulations pertaining to wheat marketing quotas, Hocking County AAA officials have reported, following a meeting in Laurelville Friday night at which 25 farmers discussed the control program.

At the Laurelville meeting were Forest O. Wolf, chairman of the Hocking County AAA, and James R. Smoot, county extension agent. Wolf explained the AAA program and Smoot discussed the present economic condition and quoted figures to show why a quota on wheat and some control over production is vitally needed.

He is a graduate of Wilmington College and obtained his master's degree from Ohio State University. He is a member of the Masonic Lodge, Grange, Central Ohio Schoolmasters' club and is president of an inter-county discussion group, formed of educators in Ross, Pickaway, Fairfield and Fayette Counties.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis have three daughters, Carole Lee 12, Jane 7, and Rose Marie 1. They plan to remove to Kingston during August.

The Scioto board has not yet had an opportunity to consider employment of a successor to Mr. Francis.

VERDICT ENDS PROBE

LOGAN, July 21—The gunshot death of Abram C. McVeigh, 61, prosperous Perry County farmer and oil driller, whose funeral services a week ago were halted because some authorities were not satisfied as to the cause of his death, finally was confirmed as suicide and the case closed.

HIGH FLYING

THIS business of flying several miles above the earth, for whatever purpose, is not all romance by any means. Quite the contrary.

Medical experts report that the effects on flyers are severe and often serious. They are not only physical but mental. There may be emotional disturbances like those produced by alcohol. They are caused by thin air lacking in oxygen, by low temperature, poor ventilation and noise. Flyers in such circumstances sometimes reach a state of boredom in which they become irresponsible, ceasing to take normal interest in what they are doing and losing their judgment.

These difficulties will doubtless be mastered as so many others have been. But the extremely high flights normally made by military aviators today have come rather suddenly, so that they are not yet well understood or provided for.

Everything considered, it is remarkable that the flyers endure so well the terrific conditions under which they operate. As a rule, only very young men can stand it, because they are more adaptable to unusual conditions and situations. Thus it happens that the most important fighting in this war is done now by boys many of whom are not yet of age. There is glamor for the kids in such work, but they pay a price.

SMART, BUT NOT WISE

PROFESSOR Harvey W. Zorbaugh of New York University put his finger on one reason for the indifference of many young people today to democracy and service.

"Our education has not succeeded as it should have, as it must," he told an audience of teachers, "in giving our youth a clear conception of what it means to live as an American." This, he explained, has been because the schools have emphasized skills and neglected values; looked upon education as an intellectual process and disregarded the emotions.

Progressive education is based on the fact that anyone works best when he is most interested. But too often the individual teacher or school misses the point and seems to try simply to keep pupils interested or entertained. Discipline for the sake of order is considered unwise and so discipline for character-building falls by the wayside.

Perhaps educators and parents have waked up before it is too late to correct

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

FRENCH SHIPS UNTOUCHED

WASHINGTON—With Great Britain scraping up every ship possible, with the United States trying to lease Axis ships from Latin American governments, and with Secretary Ickes desperately trying to relieve the Eastern oil shortage with more tankers, the inside story of French ships in the U. S. A. is extremely interesting.

Not many people realize it, but although we have taken over all of the German, Italian, Danish, and Axis shipping, we have not touched French vessels, except to guard them from sabotage.

And almost no one realizes that we actually have let some of them return with American cargoes to French African waters. In fact, French vessels seem to bear a charmed life as far as the United States is concerned.

Recently the Maritime Commission had an embarrassing experience when the "America" served as a transport, and some of the blue-jackets pilfered silverware and linen. Not wanting the same thing to happen to the giant French liner Normandie, the Maritime Commission sought to make an inventory of its luxurious trimmings so that they could be safely stored for the French in case the vessel was requisitioned in a hurry.

The Normandie has about $6,000,000 worth of furnishings, and the commission figured that about 25 percent of them would disappear if she carried troops without first storing the furnishings. So Admiral Land, chairman of the commission, telephoned the State Department asking permission to make an inventory. To which the State Department gave an emphatic No. One, the Maritime Commission warned, could go near the ship.

What has not leaked out is that last spring, before armed guards were placed on all French ships in American harbors, Admiral Leahy, U. S. Ambassador in Vichy, had promised the French that these ships would not be touched. It is understood he acted on instructions from Washington. So after the Coast Guard boarded the Normandie and other French vessels, Vichy sent a strong protest to Washington on May 26.

The State Department drafted a reply to this note, then decided not to answer it at all. Apparently it was caught between Leahy's promise and the Coast Guard's action. The note still is unanswered. And now the State Department, having got itself in an untenable position, is leaning over backwards to appease Vichy regarding these ships.

Also it is going to unusual lengths in using the ships to appease General Weygand in North Africa.

How South Sea Isles Were Rid of Hookworm

interest. . . . His work at Suva has been monumental." So wrote Dr. Victor Heiser, author of "An American Doctor's Odyssey."

Dr. Lambert has now written the book, a record of over twenty years of preventing disease in the South Seas from Tahiti right across to Papua and New Guinea. It is called "A Yankee Doctor in Paradise" (Little, Brown and Company, publishers).

Through his efforts as representative of the Rockefeller Foundation, the scourges of the islands, particularly hookworm and yaws, were brought under control. I will not spoil the reader by any detailed account of his many adventures but will content myself with one or two samples.

Native Witch Doctors

Everywhere that Dr. Lambert tried to introduce scientific methods of treatment and prevention, he found he was in competition with the native witch doctors. They were able to throw a curse, a "draunkauk."

Once a British vessel brought two royal visitors to Fiji, the Duke of Clarence, heir to the throne, and his younger brother, Prince George, who later became King George V. The natives seated them at a banquet and prepared a drink by the old method, to chew the root of kava and spit the juice into a bowl.

The Duke of Clarence who had seen the native saliva go into the bowl, pushed the cup bearer aside. Grim silence followed. George took the shell and tossed off his portion with gusto and then reached down and spun his cup across the mat—the highest compliment. The witch doctor put a "draunkauk" on the Duke of Clarence and turning to George said, "You will be the king and a great one." The Duke of Clarence died without succeeding to the throne. Dr. Lambert's specialty was the wholesale treatment of hookworm. The drug he used was carbon tetrachloride and he had some amusing experiences.

Wiping Out Hookworm

"The history of public health can not be written by the sure-cure patent-medicine man. We had our bumps, at first, but they were amazingly few. In every district where there was a hookworm frequency of over sixty per cent, we rounded the people up and gave the treatment 'en masse.' In one place we dosed 1,243, and came back in a month to find 1,111 villagers showing negative—about the average sample of our work as it increased to large proportions.

"Primitive folk made a carnival of our coming; drums sounded and they all reached out for the wizard drops. They called it 'toddy' and said it was fine because it made them drunk. Possibly it did, a little. After a child-size dose small boys would run around like wild dogs, tear up the flower beds in mission compounds, throw mud and have a perfectly bully time. Full-grown 'marrys' would caper and dance like Aunt Dinah at an old-fashioned revival; but when their big husbands smacked them, they would come back to normal with surprising alacrity."

But at any rate by 1930 hookworm in the south Pacific did not exist.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

S. V.:—"Will there be any serious after-effects on a woman who continuously used cathartics (Epsom Salts, Agarol, and phenolphthalein tablets) almost daily for fifteen years, but who has now wised up and eats the correct foods and now eliminates naturally?"

Answer: No. Nature is very forgiving in that respect and when you have really wised up and come to the mourner's bench, the past is forgotten and everything restored to normal.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Clendinging has some pamphlets which can be obtained by readers. Each pamphlet sells for 10 cents. SYNOPSIS
YLENA VARANOFF, young and pretty ex-wife of THEODORE VINCENT, wealthy easterner, arrives in La Madera with ROSE, housekeeper for VERNON STONE, Vincent's attorney.

CHAPTER THREE
ROSE OPENED her mouth, gathering strength for a definite refusal, but Ylena silenced her with a quick, stern look. Meanwhile the hotel attendant, evidently believing the man in the station wagon a joking friend of the two women, placed the luggage on top of the vehicle inside the rallied protection. While Ylena was tipping him, Rose moved nearer the driver.

"You are the most outrageously impertinent young man—"

"If you're trying to make the 8:10 train," he interrupted, "you'd better quit fussing and get in here or I can promise you it will be no gentle ride."

Ylena seconded the idea. "Yes, Rose. You've been condemning western hospitality. Here's an example and you snub it!" She pushed the pudgy little gray-haired woman ahead of her onto the small middle seat of the station wagon. "Quickly the driver headed for the depot. The blond girl continued:

"I think you owe a few apologies, thanks at the very least, for these accommodations." She nudged her companion, who in turn made a few perfunctory gracious remarks, in a spluttering, unwilling fashion.

For a lengthy moment Rose scanned the man seated directly in front of her, noticing the breadth of his shoulders and the good shape of his head. Then suddenly she caught his clear-eyed glance in the rear vision mirror. Even before he smiled she knew he was aware of her scrutiny. Not really wanting to, she smiled back, then suddenly felt much better for having done it.

The train was in when they pulled up. Without losing time, their volunteer chauffeur grabbed Rose's bags and headed toward the train. The two women followed him through the hot, blackish, tropical-like dusk. For a few seconds they stood, unable to voice the words they wished to say, then the conductor shouted his unintelligible: "All aboard!" and they gazed helplessly at each other while the tears shook in their eyes. Their helpful new-found acquaintance rejoined them, then as quickly moved aside to give the women privacy for their heart-touching farewell. For now they were open about their feelings; no longer could they hide them beneath barbed speech.

Suddenly the girl kissed the older woman's cheek and whispered: "Things will be different some day." Then she fled across the platform. She ran down one of the cobblestone walks through the cactus garden beside the station and stopped in the shelter of a fragrant, flowering oleander bush. The rasping tones of the locomotive bells were as mournful as those of ancient cathedral chiming. Ylena listened, thinking, "The train is pulling away and when it leaves, I am completely alone." She began to weep violently.

Several minutes later, she dried her eyes for the final time and looked about her in the still hot night. On a near-by bench sat the young man in the white linen suit, waiting. She started toward him. At the same time he approached her.

"Is there anything I can do to help you?" Not trusting her voice, she merely shook her head. He offered: "Then I'll take you back to your hotel."

In her room once more, Ylena realized she had forgotten to ask his name. All rational procedure had been lost in her grief. But she would learn his name later, this stranger in whom she had so much trust. She leaned on the window looking out over the lamp-lighted city, more appealing, somehow, than it had been that morning, and she had liked it even then. Now she felt sure of its welcome. She looked up at the stars, hot and glowing and very close. Yes, she thought to herself, this is my home.

The following morning she selected a few imperatively necessary pieces of furniture, then proceeded them on a little bumpy interurban car to her small ranch.

Undaunted by its elegiac emptiness, she walked through that four-roomed sanctuary, making mental pictures of the way she eventually would have it for her little girl. Later, she walked in her flower gardens, ate an enormous bunch of white, seedless grapes from her arbor, cut a bouquet of pale, summer-colored roses, inspected with bursting pride her acres of citrus trees and gave thanks in her heart.

With a copper letter opener Tate Cromwell was piercing deep signs on his desk blotter. "Oh, Percy, you always know everything about everything."

His brother-in-law retorted, "I'll bet you dollars to doughnuts that it's the same girl."

"You'd better make it doughnuts to dollars," Tate said meaningly. Oblivious to insult, Percy O'Neill talked on and on. In spite of a complete lack of respect for his sister's husband, young Cromwell could not help listening.

Finally he said: "I'll call her for a cocktail." From an office document, he repeated her name to the switchboard girl at the Alvarez hotel. In a short time he reported, "She's checked out—good Lord, Percy, do you suppose she intends to live out on that ranch?"

Percy shrugged and helped himself to whiskey from a bottle in the desk drawer. Tate mediated. "Maybe I should run out to see her."

Percy poured ice water into the liquor. "Not me! It's 115 in the shade today."

"Not you is right!" Tate said curtly. "I'm going alone."

Ylena was digging in a stubby hedge of yellow flowers when he arrived. Swiftly he walked toward her and before she could rise, dropped beside her and planted a warm kiss on her cheek.

With incredulous annoyance she asked: "How long am I going to have to duck your kisses, Mr. Cromwell?"

"Stop any time you like. The sooner the better. You will eventually, you know." He laughed as she gave him a glance of extreme irritation. "And call me Tate." He sat down on the grass. "Seriously, why haven't you been in? I've wanted to see you." What's the matter with you, anyway, he was thinking pompously. Women don't respond with disdain to the romantic overtures of Taylor Cromwell, Jr.

Fear clutched her. "The check—was there—?" she stammered anxiously.

Tate giggled. "Lord, no! We've got your dough all right. I thought you might come in just to visit me." With less levity he assured her, "Quite a few girls come in to see me."

Ylena looked at his handsome, concited face, then said in a dry voice, "Of that I have no doubt. But it so happens that I've been very busy. It's no small task to do over even a dollhouse like this one."

Idly Tate asked: "Why are you doing it over?"

"Surely," she told him with mocking good nature, "you knew it was pretty bad when you sold it to me."

He gave an embarrassed ejaculation, but protected himself. "Not at that price."

"Yes, I know, Rock bottom!" The girl aped his voice expertly, then comforted sardonically, "Don't be too ashamed. I'm not cheated. This little coup has possibilities that a man wouldn't be able to see."

Young Cromwell looked at her with admiration. "Is it possible that you're smart as well as beautiful?" He persisted, "I'll bet you're the most beautiful girl between New York and Hollywood."

"Surely," she jeered, "you mean in all the world."

"O. K., he said agreeably. "In all the world." He leaned nearer. "Yes, sir! In nothing more glamorous than those former overalls, that gingham shirt and Mexican sombrero you're still gorgeous." He made a sudden stop in his oration, to ask sharply: "Why do you smile?"

"Because you work so hard to impress the wrong person." Indulgently she resumed her digging.

He assured her lazily, "You're not the wrong person. You will find that out most any day now." He rolled over on his stomach full length in the grass. Hot sun, sifting through a fig tree, touched his dark hair with shades of blue steel and heightened his tanned coloring. Bees hummed wearily and the scent of garden flowers baked in the air. Tate turned and looked over his shoulder at the girl. "Do you know a chap named Percy O'Neill?" he asked bluntly. After a moment of pondering, Ylena shook her head. "He knows you," Tate informed her.

"Perhaps," she pulled some dead leaves from a plant.

The young man watched her face closely. "Or rather he said he knew Theodore Vincent."

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By—
Charles F. Stewart

JUST WHO'S to be Japan's Hitler isn't quite clear to our state department yet. Even as pro-Axis as it has been for some time, Nippon hasn't been, hitherto, quite as totalitarian as Europe's dictatorially ruled countries. Now, however, it rapidly is becoming so. But it still hasn't an outstanding single personality, like Adolf in Germany, Commissar Stalin in Russia, Duce Mussolini in Italy or Caudillo Franco in Spain at the head of its regime, whatever it may call itself in the Jap language, corresponding to Nazism, Communism, Fascism or Falangism.

The Japs appear to be sliding into totalitarianism by way of capitalism's suppression. At least that's the initial step. Presumably ordinary human rights will be abolished likewise, shortly. Capitalists get the gaff initially, however. The Mikado's government is quoted, in dispatches from Tokyo, as describing 'em as "radicals." That is, they're radically disinclined to be dispossessed of the last cent of their bank accounts.

France, state departmental reports indicate, is starting in totalitarianism's direction from the angle opposite to the Japanese one. Marshal Petain's scheme is to extinguish his country's electoral system—a job at popular voting. The best guess is that he'll get around to capitalism later, not first, as the Japs are doing.

France, same as Japan, lacks a conspicuous big man at the top of its totalitarian heap. Petain's too old to last much longer. Furthermore, his authority isn't his own. It's Herr Hitler's. Adolf is in Germany. Mussolini is in Italy—with a lot of qualifications, but not as many as the marshal's. Stalin, up to date, is in Russia. Franco's it, for the present in Spain. When the Japs evolve their Fuehrer or Duce or boss commissar or Caudillo or whatever they may call him, he'll be it in Nippon. Petain, though, isn't anything in his own right. Still, he's doing his damndest to turn France into a totalitarian nation.

WHO PULLS STRINGS?

Japan formally announced itself governmentally. Precisely who did the dictating isn't revealed yet. The Mikado, all-powerful as he is theoretically, really is only a figurehead. There must be some whale of a huge influence in Tokyo who hasn't been identified yet.

The nub of it is that this supreme authority has "eliminated every capitalistic element from the national economic structure" by making all private financial institutions "subsidiaries of the governmentally-controlled Bank of Japan." In short, every single (Jap equivalent of one of our pennies) is "mobilized in the state's interest."

The fact is that the Japs' lower classes haven't property enough to be worth taking away from 'em. Ever hear of a rickshaw coolie? Well, a rickshaw is a kind of a tiny little phaeton, accommodating one passenger. The coolie (a human being) runs like fury between the shafts, snaking the vehicle along after him. He generally dies before long, for the pace gives him heart disease. He makes a few coppers per day while he does live, though. Well, that guy pays an income tax. It's like making a horse pay one.

So it's no wonder the Jap fuehrer starts at the "radical capitalists'" end of the line, leaving the other end to be attended to later.

PETAINE'S VIEW

Marshal Petain looks at the French situation differently—maybe because Herr Hitler tells him to do so. His thesis is (he made a speech on the subject the other day) that universal suffrage is a punk idea. It's a system, he said, that vests authority in "sheer numbers"—total irresponsibility.

Accordingly, he's appointed a committee to draft a new French constitution.

Explaining what he wants, he spoke for a small group of high-ups (men whose services have made 'em obviously an intelligent) to do the voting, with a still higher-up group (possibly simulating down to one lone individual) to do the final governing.

He specifically mentioned "male suffrage." Apparently the ladies aren't to have votes at all, no matter how intelligent they may be. Incipient totalitarianism!

Hints on Etiquette

"Pardon me" is no longer considered good usage. It is better to say, "I'm sorry," or "I beg your pardon."

Today's Horoscope

The next year will bring substantial gain to those who have birthdays today. The gains will come both from expected and unexpected sources. Some sorrow is foreseen during this period, and they should guard well against trickery and deception. Born on this date a child will be extremely clever and possess much goodness. He or she will, however, be likely to suffer through treachery in business and friendships. Otherwise the fortune of such a person will be excellent.

A river has its stages of development, youth, maturity and old age. In the early stage a river drains imperfectly; as valleys are deepened, the drainage improves, so that in maturity the total drainage area is large and the rate of erosion high. Old age is reached when wide flats have developed and the bordering lands have been brought low.

HIGH FLYING

THIS business of flying several miles above the earth, for whatever purpose, is not all romance by any means. Quite the contrary.

Medical experts report that the effects on flyers are severe and often serious. They are not only physical but mental. There may be emotional disturbances like those produced by alcohol. They are caused by thin air lacking in oxygen, by low temperature, poor ventilation and noise. Flyers in such circumstances sometimes reach a state of boredom in which they become irresponsible, ceasing to take normal interest in what they are doing and losing their judgment.

These difficulties will doubtless be mastered as so many others have been. But the extremely high flights normally made by military aviators today have come rather suddenly, so that they are not yet well understood or provided for.

Everything considered, it is remarkable that the flyers endure so well the terrific conditions under which they operate. As a rule, only very young men can stand it, because they are more adaptable to unusual conditions and situations. Thus it happens that the most important fighting in this war is done now by boys many of whom are not yet of age. There is glamor for the kids in such work, but they pay a price.

SMART, BUT NOT WISE

PROFESSOR Harvey W. Zorbaugh of New York University put his finger on one reason for the indifference of many young people today to democracy and service.

"Our education has not succeeded as it should have, as it must," he told an audience of teachers, "in giving our youth a clear conception of what it means to live as an American." This, he explained, has been because the schools have emphasized skills and neglected values: looked upon education as an intellectual process and disregarded the emotions.

Progressive education is based on the fact that anyone works best when he is most interested. But too often the individual teacher or school misses the point and seems to try simply to keep pupils interested or entertained. Discipline for the sake of order is considered unwise and so discipline for character-building falls by the wayside.

FRENCH SHIPS UNTOUCHED

WASHINGTON—With Great Britain scraping up every ship possible, with the United States trying to lease Axis ships from Latin American governments, and with Secretary Ickes desperately trying to relieve the Eastern oil shortage with more tankers, the inside story of French ships in the U. S. A. is extremely interesting.

Not many people realize it, but although we have taken over all of the German, Italian, Danish, and Axis shipping, we have not touched French vessels, except to guard them from sabotage.

And almost no one realizes that we actually have let some of them return with American cargoes to French African waters. In fact, French vessels seem to bear a charmed life as far as the United States is concerned.

Recently the Maritime Commission had an embarrassing experience when the "America" served as a transport, and some of the blue-jackets pilfered silverware and linen. Not wanting the same thing to happen to the giant French liner Normandie, the Maritime Commission sought to make an inventory of its luxurious trimmings so that they could be safely stored for the French in case the vessel was requisitioned in a hurry.

The Normandie has about $6,000,000 worth of furnishings, and the commission figured that about 25 percent of them would disappear if she carried troops without first storing the furnishings. So Admiral Leahy, chairman of the commission, telephoned the State Department asking permission to make an inventory. To which the State Department gave an emphatic No. No one, the Maritime Commission warned, could go near the ship.

What has not leaked out is that last spring, before armed guards were placed on all French ships in American harbors, Admiral Leahy, U. S. Ambassador in Vichy, had promised the French that these ships would not be touched. It is understood he acted on instructions from Washington. So after the Coast Guard boarded the Normandie and other French vessels, Vichy sent a strong protest to Washington on May 26.

The State Department drafted a reply to this note, then decided not to answer it at all. Apparently it was caught between Leahy's promise and the Coast Guard's action. The note still is unanswered. And now the State Department, having got itself in an untenable position, is leaning over backwards to appease Vichy regarding these ships.

Also it is going to unusual lengths in using the ships to appease General Weygand in North Africa.

How South Sea Isles Were Rid of Hookworm

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Dr. S. M. Lambert had for twenty-two years the biggest practice in the world.

"If any man should write a book, it should be Lambert. He could pack it from cover to cover with fascinating, authentic human interest. . . . His work at Suva has been monumental." So wrote Dr. Victor Heiser, author of "An American Doctor's Odyssey."

Dr. Lambert has now written the book, a record of over twenty years of preventing disease in the South Seas from Tahiti right across to Papua and New Guinea. It is called "A Yankee Doctor in Paradise" (Little, Brown and Company, publishers).

Through his efforts as representative of the Rockefeller Foundation, the scourges of the islands, particularly hookworm and yaws, were brought under control. I will not spoil the reader by any detailed account of his many adventures but will content myself with one or two samples.

Native Witch Doctors Everywhere that Dr. Lambert tried to introduce scientific methods of treatment and prevention, he found he was in competition with the native witch doctors. They were able to throw a curse, a "draunku,"

Once a British vessel brought two royal visitors to Fiji, the Duke of Clarence, heir to the throne, and his younger brother, Prince George, who later became King George V. The Duke of Clarence who had seen the native saliva go into the bowl, pushed the cup aside. Grim silence followed. George took the shell and tossed off his portion with gusto and then reached down and spun his cup across the mat—the highest compliment. The witch doctor put a "draunku" on the Duke of Clarence and turning to George said, "You will be the king and a great one." The Duke of Clarence died without succeeding to the throne. Dr. Lambert's specialty was the wholesale treatment of hookworm. The drug he used was carbon tetrachloride and he had some amusing experiences.

But at any rate by 1930 hookworm in the south Pacific did not exist.

Undaunted by its elegiac emptiness, she walked through that four-roomed sanctuary, making mental pictures of the way she eventually would have it for her little girl. Later, she walked in her flower garden, ate an enormous bunch of white, seedless grapes from her arbor, cut a bouquet of pale, summer-colored roses, inspected with bursting pride her acres of citrus trees and gave thanks in her heart.

With a copper letter opener Tate Cromwell was piercing designs on his desk blotter. "Oh, Percy, you always know everything about everything."

His brother-in-law retorted, "I'll bet you dollars to doughnuts that it's the same girl."

"You'd better make it doughnuts to dollars," Tate said meaningfully. "All aboard!" Percy O'Neill talked on and on. In spite of a complete lack of respect for his sister's husband, young Cromwell could not help listening.

Finally he said: "I'll call her for a cocktail." From an office document, he repeated her name to the switchboard girl at the Alvarez hotel. In a short time he reported, "She's checked out—good Lord, Percy, do you suppose she intends to live out on that ranch?"

Percy shrugged and helped himself to whiskey from a bottle in the desk drawer.

Tate meditated. "Maybe I should run out to see her."

Percy poured ice water into the liquor. "Not me! It's 115 in the shade today."

"Not you is right!" Tate said curtly. "I'm going alone."

Ylena was digging in a stubby hedge of yellow flowers when he arrived. Swiftly he walked toward her and before she could rise, dropped beside her and planted a warm kiss on her cheek.

With incredulous annoyance she asked: "How long am I going to have to duck your kisses, Mr. Cromwell?"

"Stop any time you like. The sooner the better. You will eventually, you know." He laughed as she gave him a glance of extreme irritation. "And call me Tate." He sat down on the grass. "Seriously, why haven't you been in? I've wanted to see you." What's the matter with you, anyway, he was thinking pompously. Women don't respond with disdain to the romantic overtures of Taylor Cromwell, Jr.

Fear clutched her. "The check—was there?" she stammered anxiously.

Tate giggled. "Lord, no! We've got your dough all right. I thought you might come in just to visit me." With less levity he assured her, "Quite a few girls come in to see me."

Ylena looked at his handsome, concealed face, then said in a dry voice, "Of that I have no doubt. But it so happens that I've been very busy. It's no small task to do over even a dolhouse like this one."

Idly Tate asked: "Why are you doing it over?"

"Surely," she told him with mocking good nature, "you knew it was pretty bad when you sold it to me."

He gave an embarrassed ejaculation, but protected himself. "Not at that price."

"Yes, I know. Rock bottom!" The girl asked his voice expertly, then comforted sardonically, "Don't be too ashamed. I'm not cheated. This little coop has possibilities that a man wouldn't be able to see."

Young Cromwell looked at her with admiration. "Is it possible that you're smart as well as beautiful?" He persisted, "I'll bet you're the most beautiful girl between New York and Hollywood."

"Surely," she jeered, "you mean in all the world."

"O. K.," he said agreeably. "In all the world." He leaned nearer. "Yes, sir! In nothing more glamorous than those former overalls, that gingham shirt and Mexican sombrero you're still gorgeous." He made a sudden stop in his oration, to ask sharply: "Why do you smile?"

"Because you work so hard to impress the wrong person." Industiously she resumed her digging. He assured her lazily, "You're not the wrong person. You will find that out most any day now." He rolled over on his stomach full length in the grass. Hot sun, sifting through a fig tree, touched his dark hair with shades of blue steel and heightened his tanned coloring. Bees hummed wearily and the scent of garden flowers baked in the air. Tate turned and looked over his shoulder at the girl. "Do you know a chap named Percy O'Neill?" he asked bluntly. After a moment of pondering, Ylena shook her head. "He knows you," Tate informed her.

"Perhaps," she pulled some dead leaves from a plant.

The young man watched her face closely. "Or rather he said he knew Theodore Vincent."

WORLD AT A GLANCE

—By— Charles P. Stewart

JUST WHO'S to be Japan's Hitler isn't quite clear to our state department yet. Even as pro-Axis as it has been for some time, Nippon hasn't been, hitherto, quite as totalitarian as Europe's dictatorially ruled countries. Now, however, it rapidly is becoming so. But it still hasn't an outstanding single personality, like Adolf in Germany, Commissar Stalin in Russia, Duce Mussolini in Italy or Caudillo Franco in Spain at the head of its regime, whatever it may call itself in the Jap language, corresponding to Nazism, Communism, Fascism or Falangism.

The Japs appear to be sliding into totalitarianism by way of capitalism's suppression. At least that's the initial step. Presumably ordinary human rights will be abolished likewise, shortly. Capitalists get the graft initially, however. The Mikado's government is quoted in dispatches from Tokyo, as describing 'em as "radicals." That is, they're radically disinclined to be dispossessed of the last cent of their bank accounts.

France, state departmental reports indicate, is starting in totalitarianism's direction from the angle opposite to the Japanese one. Marshal Petain's scheme is to extinguish his country's electoral system—a job at popular voting. The best guess is that he'll get around to capitalism later, not first, as the Japs are doing.

France, same as Japan, lacks a conspicuous big-man at the top of its totalitarian heap. Petain's too old to last much longer. Furthermore, his authority isn't his own. It's Herr Hitler's. Adolf is it in Germany. Mussolini is it in Italy—with a lot of qualifications, but not as many as the marshal's Stalin, up to date, is it in Russia. Franco's it for the present in Spain. When the Japs evolve their Fuehrer or Duce or boss commissar or Caudillo or whatever they may call him, he'll be it in Nippon. Petain, though, isn't anything in his own right. Still, he's doing his darndest to turn France into a totalitarian nation.

WHO PULLS STRINGS? Japan formally announced itself governmentally. Precisely who did the dictating isn't revealed yet. The Mikado, all-powerful as he is theoretically, really is only a figurehead. There must be some whale of a huge influence in Tokyo who hasn't been identified yet.

The nub of it is that this supreme authority has "eliminated every capitalistic element from the national economic structure" by making all private financial institutions "subsidiaries of the governmentally-controlled Bank of Japan." In short, every single (Jap equivalent of one of our pennies) is "mobilized in the state's interest."

The fact is that the Japs' lower classes haven't property enough to be worth taking away from 'em. Ever hear of a rickshaw coolie? Well, a rickshaw is a kind of a tiny little phaeton, accommodating one passenger. The coolie (a human being) runs like fury between the shafts, snaking the vehicle along after him. He generally dies before long, for the pace gives him heart disease. He makes a few coppers per day while he does live, though. Well, that guy pays an income tax. It's like making a horse pay one.

So it's no wonder the Jap fuehrer starts at the "radical capitalists" end of the line, leaving the other end to be attended to later.

PETAINE'S VIEW Marshal Petain looks at the French situation differently—maybe because Herr Hitler tells him to do so. His thesis is (he made a speech on the subject the other day) that universal suffrage is a punk idea. It's a system, he said, that vests authority in "sheer numbers"—total irresponsibility.

Accordingly, he's appointed a committee to draft a new French constitution.

Explaining what he wants, he spoke for a small group of high-ups (men whose services have made 'em obviously an intelligent-lia) to do the voting, with a still higher-up group (possibly simulating down to one lone individual) to do the final governing.

He specifically mentioned "male suffrage." Apparently the ladies aren't to have votes at all, no matter how intelligent they may be. Incipient totalitarianism!

The next year will bring substantial gain to those who have birthdays today. The gains will come both from expected and unexpected sources. Some sorrow is foreseen during this period, and they should guard well against trickery and deception. Born on this date a child will be extremely clever and possess much goodness. He or she will, however, be likely to suffer through treachery in business and friendships. Otherwise the fortune of such a person will be excellent.

STAND-BY SCRIPT

While Raymond Gram Swing is broadcasting his program from London, his assistant, Morris Gilbert, formerly a reporter on the N. Y. World-Telegram, is preparing a script each Monday and Friday to be read by announcer John McIntyre in case Swing's voice doesn't come through clearly by trans-Atlantic telephone.

Since the first broadcast, when sun-spots interfered with reception in this country, Swing's talks have come through.

OLD SONG APPEAL

Popular songs may come and go but the old classic stand-bys go on forever, says Frank Forest, star tenor of radio. "Naturally, all of us singers keep abreast of the times and present the hit tunes of the day on our programs," he says. "But radio listeners have a soft place in their hearts for the songs they learned years ago. They are much more receptive to the old favorites." Frank points out that whenever dialers hear tunes like, "Sweethearts," "Madame Butterfly," "Swanee River," "Alice Blue Gown" and any of the favorites of long ago, they usually hum the tune while the radio singer is broadcasting it to them. Over a period of years these melodies have been heard time and time again until the lyrics as well as the music are familiar to the public. Almost a part of them. There is a closer bond between singers and listeners when familiar songs are presented on the airwaves.

RADIO BRIEFS

Kay Kyser this week started work on his third starring motion picture, "Playmates." With him are Ginny Simms, John Barrymore, Lupe Velez, May Robson, Charles Winninger and the full Kyser band with Principals Harry Babbitt, Ish Kabibble and Sully Mason.

The man-behind-the-man-behind the direction of "Joyce Jordan-Girl Interne" is Mendy Brown, brother of "Hi" Brown, director. Mendy does all the appointment-arranging, script-gathering, studio setting-up, for his busy brother who currently produces three separate radio programs.

One of the first to greet Billy Mills upon his arrival in Chicago to handle the music for the Ransom Sherman program was Bob Strong, who played woodwind in Mills' Chicago radio orchestra three years ago.

STARS SAY—

For Monday, July 21
Monday's astrological forecast is for a moderate degree of activity and accomplishment which may be born of steadiness, industry and sound judgment as well as enhanced by some sudden and unexpected boosts arising from secret, peculiar and surprising sources. With this there is need for alertness to intrigue, schemes and other hidden or dubious entanglements or snares. Private affairs should thrive.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of lively and interesting activities in both private and business associations. There are hints of singular or sinister involvements, coming from peculiar, baffling and hidden sources causing grief and regret, unless sound sense, reason and not imagination, be firmly maintained. Confer with elders, superiors and escape entangling alliances and pitfalls.

A child born on this day although being responsible, industrious and capable may suffer loss of peace of mind and reputation by doubtful or sinister snares and treacheries. It should be grounded in its more stable and trustworthy traits and inclinations.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS
Walls and wood trim should be washed from the bottom up, because when water runs down a soiled wall it leaves streaks, but it will not stain a wall that has already been moistened and cleaned.

Small black specks that appear in sterling silver are caused by the chemical action of salt on the silver. They may be removed with any cream silver polish if they have not eaten too deeply into the silver.

How to Take Care Of Tubbed Plants

A very effective health measure for a plant growing in a tub is illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. This consists of removing the top layer of soil and replacing it with a new layer of rich garden soil or compost. This treatment will invigorate the plant for another year.

The Lily-of-the-Nile should be watered freely during its growing period and it should also be given generous feedings of liquid manure. After the plant has flowered it is best to reduce gradually the amount of water given to it.

A bay tree can stand any amount of liquid manure feedings, or a fairly heavy mulch of manure in the spring or early summer when it makes its growth.

The hydrangea responds well to generous watering and occasional feedings of liquid manure up to the time the flowers have developed.

Annuals and perennials now in full bloom may be inspected and the most perfect blossoms marked to save for seed.

STAND-BY SCRIPT

While Raymond Gram Swing is broadcasting his program from London, his assistant, Morris Gilbert, formerly a reporter on the N. Y. World-Telegram, is preparing a script each Monday and Friday to be read by announcer John McIntyre in case Swing's voice doesn't come through clearly by trans-Atlantic telephone.

Since the first broadcast, when sun-spots interfered with reception in this country, Swing's talks have come through.

OLD SONG APPEAL

Popular songs may come and go but the old classic stand-bys go on forever, says Frank Forest, star tenor of radio. "Naturally, all of us singers keep abreast of the times and present the hit tunes of the day on our programs," he says. "But radio listeners have a soft place in their hearts for the songs they learned years ago. They are much more receptive to the old favorites." Frank points out that whenever dialers hear tunes like, "Sweethearts," "Madame Butterfly," "Swanee River," "Alice Blue Gown" and any of the favorites of long ago, they usually hum the tune while the radio singer is broadcasting it to them. Over a period of years these melodies have been heard time and time again until the lyrics as well as the music are familiar to the public. . . almost a part of them. There is a closer bond between singers and listeners when familiar songs are presented on the airwaves.

RADIO BRIEFS

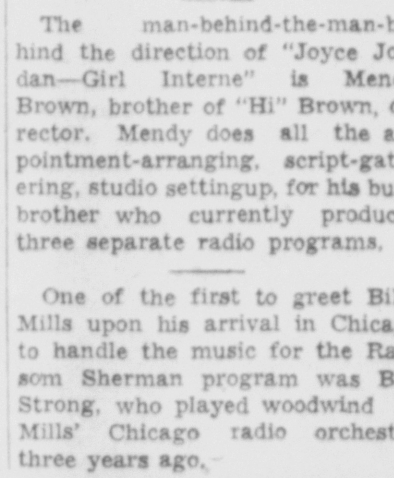

Kay Kyser this week started work on his third starring motion picture, "Playmates." With him are Ginny Simms, John Barrymore, Lupe Velez, May Robson, Charles Winninger and the full Kyser band with Principals Harry Babbitt, Ish Kabibble and Sully Mason.

The man-behind-the-man-behind the direction of "Joyce Jordan—Girl Interne" is Mendy Brown, brother of "Hi" Brown, director. Mendy does all the appointment-arranging, script-gathering, studio setting-up, for his busy brother who currently produces three separate radio programs.

One of the first to greet Billy Mills upon his arrival in Chicago to handle the music for the Ransom Sherman program was Bob Strong, who played woodwind in Mills' Chicago radio orchestra three years ago.

STARS SAY—

For Monday, July 21

Monday's astrological forecast is for a moderate degree of activity and accomplishment which may be born of steadiness, industry and sound judgment as well as enhanced by some sudden and unexpected boosts arising from secret, peculiar and surprising sources. With this there is need for alertness to intrigue, schemes and other hidden or dubious entanglements or snares. Private affairs should thrive.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of lively and interesting activities in both private and business associations. There are hints of singular or sinister involvements, coming from peculiar, baffling and hidden sources causing grief and regret, unless sound sense, reason and not imagination, be firmly maintained. Confer with elders, superiors and escape entangling alliances and pitfalls.

A child born on this day although being responsible, industrious and capable may suffer loss of peace of mind and reputation by doubtful or sinister snares and treacheries. It should be grounded in its more stable and trustworthy traits and inclinations.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Walls and wood trim should be washed from the bottom up, because when water runs down a soiled wall it leaves streaks, but it will not stain a wall that has already been moistened and cleaned.

Small black specks that appear in sterling silver are caused by the chemical action of salt on the silver. They may be removed with any cream silver polish if they have not eaten too deeply into the silver.

HEROES AND GOATS

HEROES — George McQuinn, who hits three home runs as the Browns completed a clean sweep of the Red Sox series by winning two; Charley Keller, who clung to home run leadership with his 22nd in the 17th inning as Yankees beat the Tigers; Ted Lyons, who scored his 242nd victory (ninth of the season) in the opener for the White Sox; Lew Riggs, whose pinch homer gave the Dodgers a win over the Pirates in the opener.

GOATS—Jimmy Webb, of the White Sox, whose 13th inning error led to an Athletic victory in the nightcap of a twin bill; Al Benton, who held the Yankees in check from the fifth to the 17th, then weakened and was blasted to defeat; George Archie, with two errors, George Case and Jim Vernon with one each, as part of the Senators' defeat by the Indians in the nightcap.

HOGAN'S GREAT GOLF WINS TOP CHICAGO MONEY

CHICAGO, July 21—"The little man who is always there"—that's Ben Hogan, the 140-pound package of links dynamite who as of today has not been out of the money in his last 50 golf tournaments, and the fellow who almost made a runaway of the 1941 Chicago Open.

Only some amazing last-round par-busting kept National Open Champion Craig Wood and Defending Titleholder Dick Metz within shouting distance of Hogan in the windup of the 72-hole Chicago classic yesterday. The rest of the field might just as well have stayed home.

Hogan was the leader all the way. In his opening round Friday he went five under par with a 66; he followed that Saturday with a 70, then finished yesterday's 36 holes with a pair of 69's for a gaudy 247 total.

Wood almost stole the show in his final drive. Starting six strokes down to Hogan at the halfway mark, he shaved this advantage by two strokes at 27 holes with a 67, and on his final 18 made Hogan hustle with another 67. He finished with 276, just two strokes away from the Texan.

Dick Metz lost his chance to make it two in a row in the tourney when he blew for a 73 in yesterday's morning round, and his 67 on the closing 18 was almost anti-climatic, although it did net him third place with a 72-hole count of 279.

Mario Gonzales of Rio De Janeiro, called the "Bobby Jones of South America," took amateur honors and the M. G. Fessenden trophy with his score of 286. This placed him fifth in the overall standings, behind Hogan, Wood, Metz, Jim Fehrer, who had 284, and Llyod Mangrum, with 285.

RED BIRDS FALL TWICE TO TOUGH MILLER OUTFIT

By International News Service
Minneapolis was back in the driver's seat in the American Association pennant scramble today after twice dumping Columbus, 5 to 4 and 8 to 0, while Louisville, the other contender, was splitting a twin bill with last-place Milwaukee.

The Millers overcame a 4 to 0 lead to eke out their win over the Red Birds in the opening tilt, while the Birds never had a chance in the nightcap. The loss dumped Columbus 2½ games off the pace.

Milwaukee ended an eight-game losing streak in the first game of the double event with Louisville to keep the Colonels from sharing the top spot with the Millers. But after taking the opener, 2 to 1, the Brewers dropped the second, 4 to 1, when Junie Andrus of the Colonels homered in the first stanza with the bases loaded.

Kansas City continued to slip, dropping both ends of a twin tilt to Indianapolis, 4 to 3 and 2 to 1. Ray Starr won his 17th in the opener.

Toledo and St. Paul divided, Johnny Marcum winning the first tilt for the Mudhens, 4 to 1, with a six-hit performance, and Art Herring coming through with a five-hit, 3 to 2 win for the Saints in the nightcap.

FOUR HORSES EXPECTED FOR CLASSIC STAKE TILT

CHICAGO, July 21—The smallest field in the history of the event appeared likely today for Saturday's renewal of the rich Classic Stakes at Arlington Park, in which Whirlaway makes another bid to remain undisputed king of the three-year-olds.

A four-horse field loomed for the $65,000 classic, with Whirlaway pitted against his two most persistent rivals, Blue Pair and Our Boots, and R. W. McMillan's Bushwhacker. The smallest previous field in the event was in 1939 when there were five starters.

Whirlaway is sure to be backed down to the favorite's berth, and thus will carry a double burden, for in the past the classic has been tough for favorites—only four super-specials being able to win in the twelve previous runnings of the feature. Johnstown in 1939 and Bimelech last year were victims of this jinx.

ST. PAUL OPEN BOOKED

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 21—The four-day St. Paul Open tournament will present a parade of champions when the nation's top flihter golfers tee off at Keller Course Thursday for the $7,500 Jackpot. Sam Snead, Dick Metz, Jim Foulis and Horton Smith, all former title holders will be back this year. Also entered is Ben Hogan, smiling Texan who yesterday copped the Chicago Open.

Brownies Blast Boston To Feature A. L. Chase

By Lawton Carver

NEW YORK, July 21—Up until today there might have been some doubt as to how many clubs could be figured in the American League pennant race. That has been definitely settled now, except for remotest possibilities, and it is strictly a matter between the New York Yankees and the Cleveland Indians. But while everybody has been watching the contenders and the antics of Joe DiMaggio, one of the hottest clubs in the circuit over the span of a week has been almost entirely overlooked.

Hold your hats. You'll never recognize them as such, but the St. Louis Browns suddenly have opened up the heat and unless they blow cold just as quickly will be challenging for a first division berth ere the season ends to the utter consternation of everybody.

Beaten and sometimes managled in game after game since July 6, they broke the spell last Monday and ranged through last week like raga-muffins on a spree with found money to take seven games out of eight, including four in a row from the Boston Red Sox Saturday and yesterday.

They've got seventh place clinched over the Washington Senators for the time being and stand 4½ games behind the sixth place Philadelphia Athletics, 6½ back of the fifth place Detroit Tigers, and 8½ to the rear of the fourth place Chicago White Sox, who are playing even 500 ball against the Browns' even 400.

In their four-game series with the Red Sox, the Browns made 29 runs against nine, yesterday's scores being 6 to 3 and 10 to 0, with the Browns making 28 hits against 14, and Bob Muncie hurling the shutout. George McQuinn increased his home run total to 14 for the season against the Red Sox hurling by hitting two in the opening game and one in the afterpiece.

Among other things, that double defeat dropped the Red Sox 14 games behind the Yankees, seven behind the Indians and left them 1½ ahead of the White Sox.

The Yankees increased their lead over the tribe to seven games by defeating the Tigers, 12 to 6, in 17 innings, the winning extra frame six-run blast including homers by Charley Keller and Tommy Henrich. DiMaggio maintained some kind of a rampage with a home run and three doubles.

The Indians meantime lost to Washington, 8 to 4, then won by 5 to 1. The White Sox downed the Athletics, 2 to 1, Ted Lyons scoring his 242nd Major League victory, then the A's bounced back with a 4 to 1 win in 13 frames.

The Brooklyn Dodgers' National League lead was cut to an unimposing 1½ games by the St. Louis Cardinals, who beat the Boston Braves, 4 to 2, in 12 innings and 7 to 3 in eight, while the Dodgers were splitting a pair with the Pittsburgh Pirates. The Dodgers won by 5 to 1 and lost by the same score, feature of this being that Whitlow Wyatt failed again to score his 14th win.

The Cincinnati Reds took the Philadelphia Phillies, 7 to 1 and 3 to 2, while the Giants were beating the Chicago Cubs, 7 to 5 and losing to them, 7 to 4, and with that the Reds pulled up to within two percentage points of a third place tie with the Giants.

REDS MORE NEAR THIRD POSITION WITH TWO WINS

PHILADELPHIA, July 21—The Cincinnati Reds today were higher in the loop standings than they have been since proverbial Hector was the proverbial pup—practically tied for third, although two percentage points out of it. They managed to get there by making the most of their hits to twice defeat the Philadelphia Phillies, 7 to 1 and 3 to 2.

The Phils outlived the Reds in both contests, 13 hits to 11 in the opener and eight hits to four in the nightcap. But the Reds, like the World champions they were last year, made their hits when they meant the most.

Paul Derringer turned in a neat performance in scattering the 13 Phil bingles to chalk up his first win in his last five starts in the opener. Jim Turner, who yielded eight safeties in the finale, received credit for the win, although Fireman Joe Beggs came to his assistance in the ninth.

Mike McCormick included a homer in his four-for-four in the first game, but Johnny Rizzo of the Phils countered with a four-ply swat in the nightcap.

The Reds are idle today.

HOGAN'S GREAT GOLF WINS TOP CHICAGO MONEY

CHICAGO, July 21—"The little man who is always there"—that's Ben Hogan, the 140-pound package of links dynamite who as of today has not been out of the money in his last 50 golf tournaments, and the fellow who almost made a runaway of the 1941 Chicago Open.

Only some amazing last-round par-busting kept National Open Champion Craig Wood and Defending Titleholder Dick Metz within shouting distance of Hogan in the windup of the 72-hole Chicago classic yesterday. The rest of the field might just as well have stayed home.

Hogan was the leader all the way. In his opening round Friday he went five under par with a 66; he followed that Saturday with a 70, then finished yesterday's 36 holes with a pair of 69's for a gaudy 274 total.

Wood almost stole the show in his final drive. Starting six strokes down to Hogan at the halfway mark, he shaved this advantage by two strokes at 27 holes with a 67, and on his final 18 made Hogan hustle with an other 67. He finished with 276, just two strokes away from the Texan.

Dick Metz lost his chance to make it two in a row in the tourney when he blew for a 73 in yesterday's morning round, and his 67 on the closing 18 was almost anti-climatic, although it did net him third place with a 72-hole count of 279.

Mario Gonzales of Rio De Janeiro, called the "Bobby Jones of South America," took amateur honors and the M. G. Fessenden trophy with his score of 286. This placed him fifth in the over-all standings, behind Hogan, Wood, Metz, Jim Ferrier, who had 284, and Lloyd Mangrum, with 285.

RED BIRDS FALL TWICE TO TOUGH MILLER OUTFIT

By International News Service
Minneapolis was back in the driver's seat in the American Association pennant scramble today after twice dumping Columbus, 5 to 4 and 8 to 0, while Louisville, the other contender, was splitting a twin bill with last-place Milwaukee.

The Millers overcame a 4 to 0 lead to eke out their win over the Red Birds in the opening tilt, while the Birds never had a chance in the nightcap. The loss dumped Columbus 2½ games off the pace.

Milwaukee ended an eight-game losing streak in the first game of the double event with Louisville to keep the Colonels from sharing the top spot with the Millers. But after taking the opener, 2 to 1, the Brewers dropped the second, 4 to 1, when Junie Andres of the Colonels homered in the first stanza with the bases loaded.

Kansas City continued to slip, dropping both ends of a twin tilt to Indianapolis, 4 to 3 and 2 to 1. Ray Starr won his 17th in the opener.

Toledo and St. Paul divided, Johnny Marcum winning the first tilt for the Mudhens, 4 to 1, with a six-hit performance, and Art Herring coming through with a five-hit, 3 to 2 win for the Saints in the nightcap.

FOUR HORSES EXPECTED FOR CLASSIC STAKE TILT

CHICAGO, July 21—The smallest field in the history of the event appeared likely today for Saturday's renewal of the rich Classic Stakes at Arlington Park, in which Whirlaway makes another bid to remain undisputed king of the three-year-olds.

A four-horse field loomed for the $65,000 classic, with Whirlaway pitted against his two most persistent rivals, Blue Bird and Our Boots, and R. W. McVain's Bushwhacker. The smallest previous field in the event was in 1939, when there were five starters.

Whirlaway is sure to be backed down to the favorite's berth, and this will carry a double burden, for in the past the classic has been tough for favorites—only four super-specials being able to win in the twelve previous runnings of the feature. Johnstown in 1939 and Bimelech last year were victims of this jinx.

ST. PAUL OPEN BOOKED

ST. PAUL, Minn., July 21—The four-day St. Paul Open tournament will present a parade of champions when the nation's top flight golfers tee off at Keller Course Thursday for the $7,500 jackpot. Sam Snead, Dick Metz, Jim Foulis and Horton Smith, all former title holders will be back this year. Also entered is Ben Hogan, smiling Texan who yesterday copped the Chicago Open.

Brownies Blast Boston To Feature A. L. Chase

By Lawton Carver
NEW YORK, July 21—Up until today there might have been some doubt as to how many clubs could be figured in the American League pennant race. That has been definitely settled now, except for remotest possibilities, and it is strictly a matter between the New York Yankees and the Cleveland Indians. But while everybody has been watching the contenders and the antics of Joe DiMaggio, one of the hottest clubs in the circuit over the span of a week has been almost entirely overlooked.

Hold your hats. You'll never recognize them as such, but the St. Louis Browns suddenly have opened up the heat and unless they blow cold just as quickly will be challenging for a first division berth ere the season ends to the utter consternation of everybody.

Beaten and sometimes managled in game after game since July 6, they broke the spell last Monday and ranged through last week like raga-muffins on a spree with found money to take seven games out of eight, including four in a row from the Boston Red Sox Saturday and yesterday.

They've got seventh place clinched over the Washington Senators for the time being and stand 4½ games behind the sixth place Philadelphia Athletics, 6½ back of the fifth place Detroit Tigers, and 8½ to the rear of the fourth place Chicago White Sox, who are playing even .500 ball against the Browns' even 400.

In their four-game series with the Red Sox, the Browns made 29 runs against nine, yesterday's scores being 6 to 3 and 10 to 0, with the Browns making 28 hits against 14, and Bob McMurrie hurling the shutout. George McQuinn increased his home run total to 14 for the season against the Red Sox hurling by hitting two in the opening game and one in the afterpiece.

Among other things, that double defeat dropped the Red Sox 14 games behind the Yankees, seven behind the Indians and left them 1½ ahead of the White Sox.

The Yankees increased their lead over the tribe to seven games by defeating the Tigers, 12 to 6, in 17 innings, the winning extra frame six-run blast including homers by Charley Keller and Tommy Henrich. DiMaggio maintained some kind of a rampage with a home run and three doubles.

The Indians meantime lost to Washington, 8 to 4, then won by 5 to 1. The White Sox downed the Athletics, 2 to 1, Ted Lyons scoring his 242nd Major League victory, then the A's bounced back with a 4 to 1 win in 13 frames.

The Brooklyn Dodgers' National League lead was cut to an unimposing 1½ games by the St. Louis Cardinals, who beat the Boston Braves, 4 to 2, in 12 innings and 7 to 3 in eight, while the Dodgers were splitting a pair with the Pittsburgh Pirates. The Dodgers won by 5 to 1 and lost by the same score, feature of this being that Whitlow Wyatt failed again to score his 14th win.

The Cincinnati Reds took the Philadelphia Phillies, 7 to 1 and 3 to 2, while the Giants were beating the Chicago Cubs, 7 to 5 and losing to them, 7 to 4, and with that the Reds pulled up to within two percentage points of a third place tie with the Giants.

NOW IN OUR 20th YEAR of NEIGHBORLY SERVICE

Nineteen years ago this summer the Circleville Oil Company was formed.

Our company was organized with local capital and at the beginning employed five local persons. Rapid strides have been made since that time, 19 years of doing friendly business with Pickaway County folk have passed by, and we have grown to the position of now serving hundreds and hundreds of motorists and farmers with our products.

Being a local concern, financed by local stockholders, and operated wholly by local persons, it is only natural that we patronize local concerns for every item of service and merchandise that can be bought here. Such has been the policy through all these years and will be the policy of the future.

We point with pride to our success, our will to serve, and our satisfaction in knowing that we offer the public the best in gasolines and petroleum products.

At the beginning of our 20th year in business, every employee of The Circleville Oil Company wishes to say that the loyalty of all you people has been appreciated. And we want to take this opportunity to assure you that the same excellent products will continue to be distributed by us so that our pleasant relations will go on uninterrupted.
